National Network of Libraries of Medicine News

New on YouTube: "Keeping Up with the Information Explosion," March 21, 2019

NLM/NIH News

Therapeutic with a Twist [Video] - The first reader ever to be an institutional director of NIH, Dr. Ruth Kirschner, took her role as the National Institute of General Medical Sciences in 1974. In 1977, she was named NIH's first female director. Today, Kirschner reflects on what it means to be a woman in leadership positions in science.

The National Library of Medicine's 180th Birthday - The National Library of Medicine (NLM) turns 180 years old this May 20, 2023. Janet L. Reaves, NLM Associate Director for Information Resources, will discuss the history of the Library from the War of 1812 to the present day.

NIH's Biennial Conference on Science [Video] - Join us for the 11th conference on May 17-18, 2023, to hear from NIH's top leadership and NIH-funded researchers on the latest in scientific developments.

NLM/NIH Annual Conference [Video] - Join the NIH Library and NLM staff for the annual conference on May 17-18, 2023, to hear from NIH's top leadership and NIH-funded researchers on the latest in scientific developments.

NIH/NLM National Library of Medicine Postings

Geneva Convention on the Protection of Victims of War [Video] - Join the NLM Library of Medicine for the annual conference on May 17-18, 2023, to hear from NIH's top leadership and NIH-funded researchers on the latest in scientific developments.

NIH/NLM National Library of Medicine Postings

Geneva Convention on the Protection of Victims of War [Video] - Join the NLM Library of Medicine for the annual conference on May 17-18, 2023, to hear from NIH's top leadership and NIH-funded researchers on the latest in scientific developments.